Managing Marketing Information to Gain Customer Insights

Customer-Driven Marketing Strategy:
Creating Value for Target Customers

Learning Objectives

Topic Outline

- Understand the concept of data-driven marketing
- Understand the value of big data
- Understand the data analytic techniques used in marketing
- Discuss the importance of market research and its process
- Define a research problem to guide a market research project
- Distinguish between data sources and types

Marketing Information and Customer Insights

Customer Insights are:

- Fresh and deep insights into customers needs and wants
- Difficult to obtain
 - Not obvious
 - Customers are unsure of their behavior
- Better information and more effective use of existing information

Marketing Information and Customer Insights

Customer Insights

- Companies are forming customer insights teams
 - Include all company functional areas
 - Collect information from a wide variety of sources
 - Use insights to create more value for their customers

Marketing Information and Customer Insights

Marketing Information Systems (MIS)

Marketing information system (MIS) consists of people and procedures for:

- Assessing the information needs
- Developing needed information
- Helping decision makers use the information for customer

Marketing Information System

Class practice

- Assume you are interested in opening a children's retail clothing store specializing in upscale children's fashions for newborns through 10-year-old. You are unsure whether there is enough demand in your area to be profitable.
- In a small group, discuss what information you need before making this decision and decide on which secondary sources can provide that information. Furthermore, assume you plan to conduct a survey to better estimate demand for this product and describe the best primary data collection method for your needs. Try to design a questionnaire including at least ten questions. Think about how to contact with your sample.

Assessing Marketing Information Needs

Characteristics of a Good MIS

- Balancing what the information users would like to have against what they need and what is feasible to offer

- Question 1: Have you considered data and analytics in determining the target markets(s) for your Kickstarter product? If so, which type of analytics did you use?
- Question 2: How to define big data? Why is Big Data important?

Structured or unstructured

- Data can either be structured or unstructured. If the data is structured, it means it comes in a relational format in tables that are composed of rows and columns.
- Unstructured data is not organised in any manner. It is usually text data, but can also be unorganised numeric data.

Developing Marketing Information

Marketers obtain information from

Internal data

Marketing intelligence

Marketing research

Developing Marketing Information

Internal Data

Internal databases are electronic collections of consumer and market information obtained from data sources within the company network

Scanner data is detailed data on sales of consumer goods. The data is obtained by scanning the bar codes on individual products at electronic point of sale in retail outlets. The data can provide detailed information about quantities, characteristics and values of goods sold, as well as their prices.

Developing Marketing Information

Marketing Intelligence

Marketing intelligence is the systematic collection and analysis of publicly available information about consumers, competitors, and developments in the marketplace

e.g. Nielson routinely monitor consumers' online chatter with the help of monitoring services.

e.g. P&G admitted to “dumpster diving” at rival Unilever's Helene Curtis headquarters.

Developing Marketing Information

Marketing Research

Marketing research is the systematic design, collection, analysis, and reporting of data relevant to a specific marketing situation facing an organization

Qualitative and Quantitative

Quantitative research focuses on collecting data that can be represented numerically and analysed statistically. It is usually used for descriptive or causal research. It often collects data by asking questions about 'how much', 'how many' and 'how often', usually via online, telephone, mail or in-person surveys. Generally, if you respond to the researcher by providing a number, ticking a box, or circling an option in a list or scale, you are participating in quantitative research.

Analytics is usually broken down into four types:

Descriptive,
Diagnostic
Prescriptive.
Predictive,

Developing Marketing Information

Marketing Research

Defining the Problem and Research Objectives

- Exploratory research: to gather preliminary information that will help define the problem and suggest hypotheses.
- Descriptive research: to describe things, such as the market potential for a product.
- Causal research: to test hypotheses about cause-and-effect relationships.

A/B Testing

One analytical technique that has become popular in online marketing is the use of A/B testing with more than two-thirds of businesses use A/B testing as part of their marketing strategy.

For example: If you are looking at A/B testing in website design, one web page is version A and another variant is version B. For proper analytics and statistical inference, there should be just one difference between version A and version B, which could be as simple as the background colour of the web page. If the click-through or conversion rate of version B is significantly higher than version A, then we know which background colour works best. A/B testing can also be used with customer email notifications, social media, mobile applications and online advertisements.

Marketing Research Sampling Plan

Sample is a segment of the population selected for marketing research to represent the population as a whole

- Who is to be studied?
- How many people should be studied?
- How should the people be chosen?

Developing Marketing Information

Marketing Research Sampling Plan – Types of Samples

Probability Sample
Simple random sample	Every member of the population has a known and equal chance of selection
Stratified random sample	The population is divided into mutually exclusive groups and random samples are drawn from each group
Cluster (area) sample	The population is divided into mutually exclusive groups and the researcher draws a sample
Nonprobability Sample
Convenience sample	The research selects the easiest population members
Judgment sample	The researcher uses their judgment to select population members
Quota sample	The researcher finds and interviews a prescribed number of people in each of several categories

Marketing Research Research Instruments

Questionnaires

- Most common
- Administered in person, by phone, or online
- Flexible
- Research must be careful with wording and ordering of questions

Developing Marketing Information

Marketing Research Research Instruments—Questionnaires

- Closed-end questions include all possible answers, and subjects make choices among them
 - Provide answers that are easier to interpret and tabulate
- Open-end questions allow respondents to answer in their own words
 - Useful in exploratory research

Demographic Segmentation

Demographic segmentation is the most common basis of consumer market segmentation, because these segments are:

- A. easy to define and usually easy to reach.
- B. psychographically distinct.
- C. self-value, self-contained segments.
- D. defined by the benefits consumers' receive.
- E. all of the above.

Market Segmentation

Using Multiple Segmentation Bases

Multiple segmentation is used to identify smaller, better-defined target groups

PRIZM NE classifies every American household into 66 unique segments organized into 14 different social groups.

Market Segmentation

Requirements for Effective Segmentation

To be useful, market segments must be:

Measurable

Accessible

Substantial

Differentiable

Actionable

Market Segmentation

Requirements for Effective Segmentation

- Measurable: The size, purchasing power, and profiles of the segments can be measured. E.g. left-handed segment
- Accessible: The market segments can be effectively reached and served. E.g. homosexuality
- Substantial: The market segments are large or profitable enough to serve.
- Differentiable: The segments are conceptually distinguishable and respond differently to different marketing mix elements and programs.
- Actionable: Effective programs can be designed for attracting and serving the segments.

Profitable

Profit margin percentage	60%	80%
Fixed costs	$400,000	$1,000,000
Segment profit	$140,000	$600,000

Differentiable

- Who is in their market?
- Are the segments unique?
- Does each segment require a unique marketing mix?

Market Targeting

Selecting Target Market Segments

“After a company has defined market segments, it can enter one or many segments of a given market.”

“A company should target segments in which it has a differential advantage over its competitors;

where it can generate the greatest customer value and sustain it over time”

Working on your assignment - Segmentation application

Below are instructions to the activity.

Background:

Last week you and your group members would have determined a preliminary target market for your Kickstarter product.

In this activity you will re-evaluate your target market and use research to determine and describe your market segments/variables and strategic considerations for your Kickstarter product.

Task:

Work in your group and collaboratively;

1. Identify your target market segments and provide at least 2 descriptions to each of the segmentation variables.
(Make sure to support your descriptions with evidence of research)
 - Share your responses with your class tutor for feedback
 - Go to your Canvas Group Page and create a new discussion titled "TARGET MARKET SEGMENTS".
 - Post / upload this into your Canvas group page >

Working on your assignment - Positioning application

Below are instructions to the activity.

Background: In this activity you will consider your Kickstarter product and determine your market position.

Task: Work in your group and collaboratively;

1. Determine what your positioning will be for each segment you may have identified.

(Tip1: consider the positioning variables to accentuate your USP/competitive advantages)

(Tip2: circle back to your CVP and ensure they are correlated)

- Share your responses with your class tutor for feedback
- Go to your Canvas Group Page and create a new discussion titled "MARKET POSITIONING".
